Anti-Democrat, of Baltimore,
By GEORGE L. GRAY.

THIS paper is published three times a week, price to subscribers Five Dollars per annum, payable in advance.

THE avowed and constant object of the Republican, or Anti-Democrat, has always been, and is, to combat the erroneous principles, and to expose the glaring falsehoods of the democratic party, which in this country has long endeavored, and now threatens, to overturn the constitution, and destroy the happiness of the United States. The extensive circulation and great patronage which it has hitherto met with, are strong proofs of the estimation in which it has always been held, and there is no reason to fear that under its present Editor it will lose any of its spirit, or neglect any of the duties it has imposed upon itself, in defence of the dearest rights of Americans.

SEVERAL of the papers containing the original Address of the Editor, have been forwarded to gentlemen in Alexandria. Those who desire to become subscribers are informed that he has appointed Cotton and Stewart his agents here, and authorized them to give receipts for any money paid to them on account of the paper.

OBSERVATIONS

ON JUDGE CHASE'S CHARGE, AND THE
REMARKS THEREON IN THE NA-TIONAL INTELLIGENCER.

THOSE politicians who are for having governments in a perpetual state of alteration, are not only mischievous as quacks and empirics from their ignorance of the constitution of man, but are also mischievous from improbity, like some knavish surgeons who keep a wound continually open and exert all their art in preventing it from healing, in order to secure to themselves a continuation of probing and prodding. Common sense would dictate, that one of the greatest possible perfections, indeed the fine-qua-non of a good constitution, would be its probable permanence: but those men will have it a matter of every day's new moulding; a thing of change, not to govern or guide the people, but to be perpetually governed, guided, and turned topsy turvy, or inside out by every new set of men. A thing in itself absurd, since it allows no one point at which the government ought to be permitted to stand. The writer before us has, by indulging in those chimeras, floundered and floundered into many contradictory notions: While he insists that the form of government is all in all, and of course must mean that there is some one point of constitutional excellence from which a departure would be bad, he insists upon the nation's having a right to annul it. Nay, he goes the length of saying, that though the laws protect the person and property of every man, that still it is the form of government which alone is of importance. He cites, with a view to censure Judge Chase's expression, "Where ever the laws protect the person and property of every man, true liberty exists, whatever the government is." Whether it be from a jumbling of crude, half concocted notions, arising from undefined terms & ambiguous words, or from a determination to cavil at every thing, he here appears to very conspicuous dilapidation; for we refer to any man of common sense what more certain or rather what other symptom can there be of good government than the protection of person and property; what is the end, the sole object of government? Protection of person and property! In which protection is of course included that of personal freedom. But this will not content our philosophic politicians; they must have a certain form of government, and no matter how productive of good any other may be, they renounce it. Like the philosopher met by Lemuel Gulliver in his travels, who refused to eat a pudding which the whole company were praising and devouring, because on enquiry he found that the pot in which it was boiled was not of that shape called a parallel-pipedon, as the professors of the Romish church held all prayers, masses and sacrifices to be mere nullities, if offered under any roof, or within any walls not built in the form of a cross, those fanatics will not accept the blessing of protection of person and property, unless they are assured that it flows from a form of government exactly shaped to jacobinism. Perhaps a more perfect illustration of the weakness and folly of the writer's objection could not be thought of, than that which he himself has made choice of—the sun. "As well, says he, might we affirm the sun to be of no importance so long as we enjoy its light and heat." Hitherto men have been contented with the benefits of light and heat, as the only ones they can possibly expect from the sun, and the best and greatest of the human race have prostrated their souls in gratitude and admiration before the Omnipotent who has created that stupendous luminary. But this will not serve our new fangled, Frenchified philosophers of the rights of man and the age of reason. There is something they have found out in the sun of great importance to mankind besides the benefits of light and heat. These last are old fashioned things—familiar to our fathers and grandfathers, and therefore not fitted to content beings of endless perfectibility, like men. It is really not very consistent with the patriotism, philanthropy, douce humanite, benevolence and cosmopolitanism of one of that gentleman's sect, to be in possession of such a valuable secret, and not publish it pro bono publico. A third benefit, even though it should not be equal to either of the other two, would be well worth wishing for. We are afraid, however, that he has made a trifling mistake, and imagined himself influenced by the sun, when in reality he has been only under the dominion of the moon, that inconstant planet from which the sect derive a second hand glimmering light, of late yecept illumination. They may say with Falstaff,

"Let not us that are Squires of the night's booty, be called thieves of the day's beauty; let us be Diana's foresters, Gentlemen of the Shade, Ministers of the Moon, and let men say we be men of Good Government, being governed as the sea is by our noble and chaste mistress the Moon under whose countenance we—STEAL."

1st. part Henry IVth.

But if, by his allusions to the sun, the writer meant to supply the deficiency of meaning in his objection to that part of Judge Chase's Charge, and to have it understood that the importance of government, independent of its producing protection of person and property consisted in permanence, we can only say, that protection of person and property does not exist in a constitutional view, unless it exists permanently: As well might it be called protection which a calf receives when it is in the act of fattening and whitening for the knife—or that which the revolution of France affords to her unhappy people. But let us suppose the gentleman's wish accomplished. Let him draw up a constitution of his own—patch up a thousand absurdities from the splendid visions of Harrington, the presumptuous plans of the Abbe Seiyes' pigeon holes, and the depths of Tom Paine's wickedness, and array them in all the splendor of his own imagination; we will suppose it done, and will suppose, what is still more improbable, that this child of his fancy is productive of all the good for which men look in such effences; to wit, protection of person and property. But where or how is this sun-like permanence (all he can mean) to be provided for? If he makes any provision for that, his whole sect, if they entertain his notions, will rise up and denounce him a despot, a tyrant, a plunderer from the rights of man. What! they would cry, taking the words out of his own mouth, make a permanent constitution? Make an instrument of oppression: "For so it must be, unless the nation possess the right of amending or annulling them, and of controuling those who administer them." These are his words.

These, readers, these are the notions of our democrats; notions, which, strange to tell, combine great weakness, and yet great potency of mischief. Nothing with them is good, which is not calculated for perpetual change. These old witch nurses are so fond of administering to disease, and with their shrivelled, withered hands bolstering up deformity and decrepitude, that they would allow you nothing but a rickety, hunch-backed brat of a constitution that they might be perpetually employed in stuffing, fwaying, and medicating it. And thus, to use the words of the greatest political philosopher that ever existed, "They would make the extreme medicine of the constitution its daily bread, and thereby render the habit of society dangerously valerudinary."

BOTSON, June 14.

Arrived, (via quarantine) brig Franklin, West, from Surinam. Left brig Union, Beckford, for Salem; Captain Stimpson, from Boston; Atlantia, Law; America, of and for Providence. At Brandt's Point, brig Elizabeth, Fletcher, 50 days from Newburyport. Markets pretty good for flour and fish, sugar and molasses high, cotton, coffee and cocoa, not allowed to be exported.

Brig Neptune, Loring, 36 days from Bordeaux. Left the brig Fame, of Bon, and a brig belonging to Charleston. Spoke June 3, lat. 41, 56, long. 56. brig Orion, Prior, from Norfolk for Liverpool. 6th, a brig belonging to Wiscasset, bound to Greenock.

Brig Edmond, White, 30 days from Jamaica. Left brig ———, Blunt, to sail for Newburyport; ———, Sally, Hawes, to sail for Philadelphia; and several other Americans, names unknown. May 21, past Cape Antonio, saw an English ship belonging to London, from Savanna-la-Mar, which had been 14 days on shore on the Cape, had 5 feet water in her hold, and expected to be got off. Three American schrs. were along side lightening the ship, viz, schrs, Three Sisters, Lydia, and Charlotte, bound to New York.

NEW YORK, June 20.

Last evening arrived at this port, the fast sailing brig Hoan, captain Edler, in 11 days from Cape Francois. By captain F. we are informed that a French frigate arrived at the Cape two days previous to his sailing, in 28 days from Bordeaux, which place she left the 8th May, having on board 500 troops and one million of dollars to pay off the troops in the island. Three other frigates were nearly ready to sail for St. Domingo with 1500 troops. The captain of the frigate informed, that on the 8th of May, no account of hostilities having commenced between England and France had been received at Bordeaux, but war was the general topic of conversation. Captain F. further informs, that at the Cape all was quiet, and business very dull.

Affairs at St. Kitts present a very hostile appearance, and indicate the actual commencement of war. Letters of a late date, received in town from Guadeloupe and St. Martins, announce that the commanders of the British frigates have received orders from their government to capture all French vessels; and that several are cruising to the windward of Guadeloupe and Martinique expressly for that purpose.

CHILICOTHE, June 4.

Wednesday last an express arrived here from Mad-River with the following communications, addressed to the governor.

Gentlemen,

In answer to your favor, of the 23d instant received on the 25th, with its unhappy contents, has been duly attended to, I have called a number of the chiefs of the Wiandot nation together, and here forward you their answers, and shall continue to do every thing in my power to give full satisfaction to my fellow citizens.

I am gentlemen,

Your humble servant,

ISAAC ZANE.

Head of mad river, April 28, 1803.
Messrs. Elias Langham and Duncan M'Arthur. ——— Chillicothe.

Report of a council, held at the head of Mad River by several Wiandot chiefs, respecting the tenor of a letter to Isaac Zane, from Elias Langham and Duncan M'Arthur.

We address to the militia, and request that they will not be rash about what happened, and that they will look before them and have pity on our children and theirs.

We clear your mouth—wipe the tears from your eyes, and open your ears so that you may hear what we have to say.

We wish you to be two rash on this subject; we know not how long it will be, but we shall find out who has done this mischief; you must not think it long, but we will find it, and then we will have a fair council amongst us.

Father, (Governor)

No, we address to you, and request you to recollect the laws that was made by the treaty, that it was rested assured on both sides that if there were people to break this law of friendship, that it would be bad people alone that should or would violate our friendship; but we must take care that the innocent must not suffer for the guilty.

We shall be strong in finding out the murderer and if we find him first we shall acquaint you immediately.

Our present opinion is that it is some people of great distance, that are now living among us, with a mind of clearing off to their own country and wish to break our friendship.

We send you a belt, in testimony of our continued friendship.

Head of Mad River, 28th of May, 1803.
Report of a council held at Mad River, by the chiefs of the Mingo nation, respecting the contents of a letter, dated the 2d May, from Col. Langham and Duncan M'Arthur, concerning the unhappy circumstance that has lately happened.

ADDRESS.
Dry your tears and refrain from weeping until we have time to exert ourselves in every respect, to find out who has done the mischief, which we will certainly do.
You must expect that we feel the same grief at heart with yourselves, for the loss of our brother.

We request that you will consider our situation, and not distress us by punishing the innocent for the guilty.
We are living in the bounds of our brothers the white peoples land, and it is our wish to live in friendship with them.

We are led to believe that it is people from a large distance that has done this mischief, that wish to breed discord among us and then fly to their own country. Be this as it may, we will use every exertion to find out the murderer, and with all possible expedition let you know. At the same time humbly request that you will not use any distressing means, until you hear from us again.

This from your affectionate Friend and Brothers,
UNDEADEHO, a Mingo.
(Turtle tribe.)
PETEANOCKWAY, a Shawnee (Wolfe tribe.)

This we send by our trusty friend and brother, James M'Pherson, and live in hopes and expectation that he will bring us a friendly answer from our different brothers.
To his excellency, Edward Tiffin, Esq.
Governor of the State of Ohio.

To the chiefs of the Wiandot and Mingo nations of Indians.
Friends and Brothers,

I have received by your trusty friend and brother, James M'Pherson, the reports of your councils held at the head of Mad river, on the 23d and 28th of May, and am extremely happy to hear from you on this melancholy occasion. I will relate to you the unhappy occurrences that have happened. On the 20th of last month an Indian, of what nation I know not, attacked captain Herod, on the north fork of Paint Creek, near the old town, and in a cruel manner, shot him, to-hawked and scalped him, without any provocation whatever. We were much distressed on this occasion, fearing that it might provoke some of our inconsiderate people to revenge his death on an innocent person of your people.

Our fears were too well founded; for on Monday following, as two or three of our men were riding through a prairie, near the old town, they discovered an Indian, and in an ungenerous manner put him to death. From the description we have of him, we fear it is Waw Wilway, a Shawnee, though of this we are not quite certain. Before he fell, he killed one of our white men, and wounded another.

Friends and Brothers,
We mean not to let the Indians death pass unnoticed. As soon as the wounded man who killed him is in a situation from his wounds, he will be delivered up to the laws of his country.

Friends and Brothers,
We have now lost two men, and you have lost one; and although the Indians were the first aggressors, yet we do not mean that the harmony which has heretofore subsisted between your nations and our government shall be further interrupted; on our part, we have confidence in your declarations, that you will exert yourselves to find out the Indian who murdered capt. Herod, and deliver him up that he may be dealt with according to law, as well as the white man who murdered the Indian, as examples to deter the inconsiderate both of your people and ours, from committing acts of hostility which may endanger the peace and happiness of both sides.

Friends and Brothers,
Wipe the tears from our eyes, and rest assured of our real disposition to respect your rights and live in habits of friendship and brotherhood with you. We will caution all our frontier people to that effect, and request that you, in the like manner, will be particular in cautioning all your young warriors and hunters to cultivate peace and friendship with our people.

We received your Bst, in testimony of your continued friendship, and request you to accept our sincere wishes that the Great Spirit may direct your people and ours, to the cultivation of peace & friendship towards each other.

EDWARD TIFFIN.

State of Ohio.

TRANSLATION.
DON JUAN VENTURA MO-
RALES, &c.

I make known, that his excellency Sr.
Dn. Pedro Ceballos, Secretary of state, and of his universal dispatch, has addressed to me, under date of the 1st of March last, the following royal order: "The king being informed of the proclamation which you have published, prohibiting the deposit of the merchandize and effects of the citizens of the United States at New Orleans, granted to this power by the 22d article of the treaty of 1795, his majesty has thought proper to order that you permit the said deposit at New Orleans, without prejudice to what the two governments may mutually agree upon concerning the meaning which ought to be given to the said treaty, in respect to changing the establishment of N. Orleans for another on the banks of the Mississippi, in order that the deposit of the merchandize and effects of the United States may be carried into effect: which I communicate to you by order of his majesty for its most punctual fulfilment.

"Aranjuez, 1st March, 1803.
"PEDRO CEBALLOS."

And consequently the provision of the 16th of October of last year, which prohibited the introducing and depositing of the merchandize and effects of the citizens of the United States, until this intendency should receive the express order of the king authorizing him to allow it—being without any force or vigor, I have tho't proper to order, that it be posted up in the usual places, in order that the public and the officers (to which copies of the sovereign determination shall be sent) being informed thereof, the deposit may be carried into effect with the same and equal formalities as heretofore observed.

The present given under my hand, and counter-signed by the undersigned Notary of Finance, in the house of the Inten-dency of New Orleans, 17 May, 1803.

[The following is from the New York Morning Chronicle, the Editor whereof, tho' avowedly democratic, occasionally divers himself with the flippancies of the "Presidential Bagpipe."]

The Aurora.—The Aurora received by the last mail occupies above two columns with remarks on several new papers, and among the rest the Morning Chronicle. They are too gross and vulgar, as well as too stupid and tedious, for insertion, or we might copy them as an object of curiosity. The following extracts may serve as a specimen: who or what he drives at we cannot conceive; but rather view his remarks as the ravings of insanity. We recommend that he should be treated like a maniac, and furnished with a straight waistcoat and clay cap. The latter would be peculiarly well adapted to his head piece. But here comes the extract:

"Heavens how it tires the laughing muscles, to hear these caudle-blooded quacks in literature! Creatures whose moonshine productions derive all that is in them from the servility of imitation, of imitation so stupid as to resemble only the monstrous without ever catching the accidental grace which will some times mingle with frivolity: to hear a lean hind, whose boasted midnight potation is a point of brandy, and whose awful morning phiz exhibits a mind inebriated by a ridiculous vanity & a body and habitual intemperance; to hear a pompous heap of hireling iniquity, of human faculty put out as use, at literary whore-dom, a creature blasted with the evidence of his own connivance with the author of his own penegryic! and adding the pander for the most infamous of men and the most rascally of ends, to hear a heap of infectious folly of this kind ferment, and to see it froth is not surprising; but that it should be supposed not to offend the sense, or to operate with wholesomeness upon any man or men of common delicacy, is too much to believe." Enough of such trash!

We were at a loss to find what was the particular object of all this clatter, and why the creature should take hold of us in his crazy fit; but at last, when the convulsions of laughter would permit us to proceed, we found that a paragraph with which we had 5 or 6 weeks ago prefaced one of Sheridan's speeches, had called up our share of this ribaldry. The following were our remarks:

"The various kinds of eloquence displayed by the late celebrated British orators, have often been the subject of remark, as being entirely different in their manner, yet equally eminent: Mr. Fox, rapid, impressive, and flowing like a torrent. Mr. Pitt, animated, clear, perspicuous and elegant. Burke, flowery, lofty and figurative. Sheridan, distinguished for wit, whim, and humorous satire."

The editor, of course, directly contradicts these remarks, and is terribly offended at our not comprehending in these concise strictures all the oratorical qualities of these gentlemen. He is really so stupid as not to see that, instead of drawing "characters of these orators," we were giving their traits of discrimination.

He denies the justice of our remarks on Mr. Fox, and yet, in a laboured paragraph of forty lines, he talks of the "force of his style," the "vehement sincerity with which he grasps and elevates his subject," and says, that he "leaves his hearers fully possessed of the sentiments he meant to impress."

He asserts that "the characters of Burke and Sheridan are unlike the originals," yet adds, "it is true that Mr.
Burke was lofty, flowery and figurative, and Sheridan witty, humorous, satirical, and abounding with whim."

Let us be permitted to tell Mr. Duane, that though he may write good electioneering squibs, and be very capable of penning ill-natured or flurrious paragraphs, he may still be a man destitute of either taste or literature.

While he confines himself to the grovelling subjects of vulgar abuse in which he excels, the world may attribute to him depravity of taste, but without discovering his deficiency of knowledge.

Let him remember Midas, and keep the asses ears covered.

And now for a little notice of the real cause of his thus venting his gall upon us: which is, his not being permitted, unchecked, to domineer over the republicans of Pennsylvania, or to hector and menace the officers of Administration.

After we had long noticed with silent contempt, the gross and slanderous abuse that was frequently thrown out against us, we at length had our attention excited by a most impudent attempt to menace the governor and leading republicans of a neighboring state with threats of denouncement if they did not according to direction.

We perceived that an artful plan had been concerted, and that a paper of this city had been engaged to aid and abet in the plot. We were surprised, to find that a man who had been fostered and cherished by the republican party; whose services had been rewarded far beyond their merits, by the support which had been generally given to his paper, and by the governmental business in which he had been professionally employed: That such a man should have the vanity to consider himself the dispenser of life and death and should endeavor to establish a despicable tyranny over the republican party.

We were astonished to find that a regular system had been adopted, and that a couple of obscure and disreputable soreigns should audaciously expect, merely from having the direction of newspapers, that the republican party was to tremble at their nods, and that American citizens, nay the very officers of administration, should hold their characters and their factions during their will and pleasure.

We thought it time to let these men know the republicans of these United States had not struggled hard to achieve a victory over their federal opponents, for the purpose of placing themselves under their direction.

Our country opens its arms to the inhabitants of all nations. The virtuous and industrious foreigner is welcome to our shores: his prosperity, his happiness shall be equally protected with our own.
The blessings of our free and independent nation; of our truly republican government; blessings but little known among Europeans; he shall enjoy equally with ourselves.

But let it not be supposed that the American people will tamely suffer turbulent and warlike foreigners to take the direction in their political affairs; that they will tamely see their native citizens daily calumniated in the most unfeeling and flamelol manner; and the officers of administration threatened with denounce-ment and with a deprivation of the public confidence, that they will see these menaces daringly carried into execution, by unprincipled men, who are endeavoring to destroy the tranquility of a country which is extending to them the same comfort it furnishes to its own citizens.

While we know the value of virtuous and worthy men, and prize them equally, on whatever region of the earth they may have derived their existence: without requiring whether they are of foreign or domestic origin; still we know how to regard officious and intrusive strangers, who are endeavouring to introduce the vicers of other countries into this nation, and who are forming combinations to build themselves up by destroying the tranquility, and debasing the character of the American people.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman at Cape Francois, dated May 29th to his friend in Philadelphia.

"Of late we have received no alarm from the Brigands, and we anticipate shortly the hour of peace. One circumstance to establish this expectation, with "confirmation strong," is a commercial treaty lately formed between government and a large body of Brigands. They come in daily with large supplies of produce, and return to the mountains unmolested. All the ships of war have sailed from hence for France. By late accounts the embers of war appear to be fanning by the two great Potentates of Europe, and unless extinguished by the influence of negotiation; again will the flames of carnage and destruction desolate those provinces, which scarce wrested from ruin by peace; require the balm of amity, instead of the poison of battle.

Should war with all its horrors succeed, a struggle more dreadful than the spasms of extermination exercised by the Romans towards the Carthaginians, will be the most probable result. France or England must fall; and with that awful ebb of greatness, the political systems of Europe will be swallowed up in the earthquake, and like "the baseless fabric of a vision leave not a wreck behind."

Blessings of Litigation.—At the last supreme court in Newcastle, Delaware, a contention about a sheep worth three dollars was closed without trial, and the united costs and expenses of the parties were more than 300 dollars!

Rabelais tells us a story of one Philipot Flacut, who being brisk and hale, fell dead as he was paying an old debt; which perhaps causes many, says he, not to pay theirs, for fear of the like accident. (Port Folio.)

A VALUABLE MILL FOR SALE.
THE subscriber wishes to sell his MILL, known by the name of Clifton Mill, within two and a half miles of Dumfries, on the waters of Quantico, which is as constant a stream as any in this part of the country, and in an exceeding healthy situation; very conveniently situated to a fine wheat country, not being more than half a mile out of the way, in going to Dumfries, from the main road leading from Fauquier Court-House, Centerville, &c. (and by some thought not any out of the way at all) and a very good road to it. There are, if the purchaser chooses, 227½ acres of land which will be reserved, or a smaller quantity as may be agreed on. The mill is an over-shot, with a wheel of 20 feet 9 inches and 4 feet head, with two pair of stones. One pair of French burrs of 5 feet, the other of Cologne, with every apparatus necessary for carrying on merchant business to the best advantage. The mill house is fifty feet long and twenty seven feet wide, two stories high, with a small kiln for drying corn, together with a barn, stable, cow house and lumber house, convenient to the mill. A convenient dwelling house, (not quite finished) with a kitchen, meat and corn house; the whole of which have been built within 7 years past. There are two very thriving young orchards of peach and other fruit trees. It was supposed, had not the frost killed the fruit this spring, upwards of 100 gallons of brandy might have been made from them. Should the whole of the land be required with the mill, there is another small house, kitchen and meat house, at a short distance from the former.
The situation of this property must render it a desirable acquisition to any person inclined to engage in this line of business; particularly so as it is situated to near tide water. It is deemed unnecessary to say any thing more respecting the premises, as it is presumed any person inclined to purchase would wish to see them. Nothing would induce me to part with this valuable property, but the pressing demands against me which I am anxious to discharge, therefore a great bargain may be expected. Any further information may be known on application to,
